Lead-up tó The Election By 1835, it had become obvious to political observers both inside Jacksons political party and to potential Whig opposition that Van Buren was to be the successor to the old war hero, not John C.. Their strategy was to be one of divide and conquer, hoping to split the electoral vote with multiple candidates and force the election into the House of Representatives.. They settled in Kinderhook, New York, and it is here that Martin Van Buren was born.. Yet none of this stopped Van Buren from rising to the top of the political world through a combination of intelligence, political acumén, and the ability to choose allies that would benefit him personally.. As expected, the Whigs attempted to drag him down and their attacks on his stances and policies mirrored many of their attacks on Andrew Jackson, but it was to no avail.. He knew how to win elections, he knew how to run campaigns, and he knew how to govern..
